MEN ARE SENTENCED.

Scott and Collins Taken Before Judge Park at the Point.

Stevens Point Journal.—W. D. Scott and Jack Collins were brought up from Grand Rapids Wednesday morning, charged with the murder of a man named "Chew" or "Chewie" in the prison at Stevens Point. They were taken before Judge Park at the Point.

When arraigned for sentence Collins told the court that he is 25 years old, that he was born in Wyoming, that his parents now live in Wyoming and that he committed the forgery when he was drunk and the only reason he made of the court was that he was sentenced to the state prison at Waupun, and not to the Green Bay reformatory. The reason he gave for this request was that at the state prison they allow prisoners who are addicted to the tobacco habit a small supply of the "weed," while at the reformatory this luxury is denied them. Judge Park, however, condemned him to the reformatory for a term of eighteen months and so forth that length of time he will have to worry along as best he can without either a "chew" or a "smoke."

"Collins," whose name is said to be Mitchell, drifted into Grand Rapids in June with the Barnes circus. He was employed as cook in a restaurant at the Rapids, where he became acquainted with Donna Zanol, with whom he made three attempts to elope. Fortunately, however, the mother of the girl succeeded in rescuing her from him and his arrest for forgery followed. It is said that he has served three and a half years in the Fort Madison, Iowa, penitentiary for forgery.

The only reason Scott gave for the forgery he committed was that he "was tempted and fell." He gave his occupation as that of detective, and said he has a wife and two children, all of whom are now being supported by his sister, who is a clerk in the Marshall-Field store, Chicago, at a salary of $10 a week. Prior to his arrest he was running an auto livery at Chippewa Falls, an occupation which it was stated he could resume if he was paroled. Sentence was suspended and he was placed on parole for a term of three years and remanded to the custody of the sheriff of Wood county until the formalities connected with proceedings of this kind can be completed with.

Wants $3,500 Damages.

Pittsville Record.—Summons and complaint has been served against the town of Cary, instituting suit for damages in the amount of $3,500, by G. A. DeBolt thru his attorney, E. C. Pors, of Marshfield.

All advances toward a settlement of the difficulties out of court have failed and the town of Cary has, through its attorney, Chas. E. Brice, Grand Rapids, made arrangements to fight the case in court.

The case grows out of the damages to his person sustained by Mr. DeBolt about a year ago when his team ran away throwing him from the wagon.

As was tossed over the dashboard and the wheels of the wagon passed over his head and shoulders, causing severe injuries to his head and body from which he has lost the sight of one eye.

From bank numbers of the Record we learn that Mr. DeBolt, his wife and son had started for Pittsville with a pig rack on the wagon. They had not progressed far when the horses shied and started to run, pulling the wagon over the side of the road. The complaint avers that the road was obstructed by growths of small trees and shrubbery along the side and that a flight of a partridge or quail or game bird from this brush caused the collision to start on a mad race down the road.

The funeral was held on Tuesday afternoon from the east side Lutheran church, Rev. R. J. Paulz officiating.

Miss Anna Sandman, of Stevens Point who has been spending two weeks in the city visiting with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Sandman returned on Sunday. Miss Sandman is employed as bookkeeper in the Stevens Point Journal.

Karlus Underwood, a colored gentleman residing from Terra Haute, Ind., was given ten days in the county jail by Judge Pomerville Monday, for the complaint against Mr. Underwood being that he had imbibed too freely of spirituous liquors and was in an intoxicated condition.

About Returning to Germany.

All who are contemplating returning to Germany under present conditions will be interested in regulations governing such return.

A German who emigrates to this country before he is seventeen years old or before he is called upon for military service may, after five years residence in rights of fancy as to what the new system would mean to a visit. The right to remain in his former country is denied by Germany, and he may be expelled after a brief sojourn on the ground that he left Germany merely to evade military service.

It is not safe for a person who has once been expected to return to Germany without having obtained permission in advance to do so. A person, who has complete military service, reached his thirty-first year and become an American citizen may safely return to Germany.

Treaties between the United States and Germany states provide that naturalized German-American citizens after a residence of five years in this country shall be recognized as United States citizens on their return to Germany. But a naturalized American of German birth is liable to trial for an offense against German law committed before emigration.

Information issued by the Imperial Russian consulate at Chicago says: If a Russian subject holds a foreign passport issued to the government of the province from which he came, he needs no further document to be admitted to Russia. Russians not holding such passports must present whatever documents they have to be certified by the Russian consulate before they sail.

If the applicant for a passport has no document of any sort to present to the Russian consulate in this country he may obtain the necessary certificate for presentation to the consul from a clergyman of his own denomination.

MARKETING BY MAIL NOT VERY POPULAR

When the government established the parcel post system in this country about a year ago numerous writers indulged in flights of fancy as to what the new system would mean to the farmer and the city dweller by enabling the city man to drop a card to his friend in the country, and the result would be that the next day the city dweller would receive a pound of nice fresh butter, a dozen or two of eggs, a turkey or any other sort of farm produce that the city man might desire. It sounded nice to a theorist, and some people believed that it was going to come about.

However, investigations that have been made recently do not bear out the theories of these people. Some people are using the parcel post for this purpose to a limited extent, but it has not come into general use by any means, and there is a good reason why it should not be so.

While parcel post rates are low, still a dozen eggs cannot be transported in this manner nearly as cheaply as a hundred dozen can be brought in by a farmer in the back end of his wagon, and the eggs in one instance are just as fresh as they are in the other.

Then the American public as a nation are more lazy than thrifty. Almost any householder would rather buy his produce right

POPE PIUS X DIES IN ROME

End Comes Suddenly to Head of Roman Catholic Church.

WORRIED OVER WAR

Conflict of European Nations
Caused Pontiff to Grieve
Deeply—Last Words
a Peace Prayer.

Rome, Aug. 20.—Pope Pius X. died at 10 o'clock this morning. The exact time has not yet been announced.

The passing of the supreme pontiff of the Roman Catholic church was not unexpected. From about noon he had been unconscious and steadily grew weaker toward evening. Official bulletins prepared the church for the worst.

He had realized his condition early yesterday morning, when he said farewell to his sisters and his brothers and laid his last injunctions upon Cardinal Merry del Val, the papal secretary of state.

End Hastened by War.

Death was due to his ancient enemy, bronchial catarrh, which became acute on Sunday.

The attacks which he fought off a year ago returned to him with increased strength by the fact that the great European war.

The vitality with which he fought former attacks had been absorbed in his prayers and meditations for peace. The assistance he once gave his physicians was lacking, as he forgot himself and thought only of the catastrophe which the world is facing.

Early Death Report Denied.

Early in the afternoon a report that the pontiff had expired was current. It gained strength by the fact that church bells began to ring. The Vatican immediately denied the report of the pope's death and explained that the bells were ringing only to call the faithful to prayer for his recovery.

At 4:10 o'clock the pope had a sudden relapse. A bulletin issued at that time by Dr. Marchisiani, the physician in charge, left no doubt that the eminent patient's life was in danger.

Cardinals and Kin Called.

Immediately after this bulletin was posted the physicians notified the Italian government that the illness of the pontiff was grave. All the cardinals who are out of town were summoned to Rome. The pope's brother, Angelo Sarto, also was called.

The pontiff's condition became grave yesterday morning, and it was only by the most heroic efforts on the part of the attending physicians that he was kept alive. His condition seemed to improve after administration of oxygen, but signs of suffocation and diffused bronchial inflammation continued. The temperature at that time reached 103, with pulse weak and at times infrequent.

Illness Began With Cold.

On Tuesday, Dr. Marchisiani announced that the pope was suffering from a slight cold, and that possibly a complete rest for a week would restore him to his usual health. The bronchial conditions spread, however, and yesterday it was announced that the pope's condition was serious.

Dr. Marchisiani was able to leave the Vatican for a time in the afternoon, owing to the amelioration of symptoms. He said that nothing in the morning had indicated the grave crisis which was so soon to make its appearance.

Shortly after he left Dr. Amleto examined the patient. He explained that the sudden collapse was due to the pontiff's age and the gouty affection which always combined to give bronchial catarrh of an acute nature a most serious character. Dr. Amleto further explained that the pontiff's diminished vitality, caused by old age, might make his illness fatal.

War Blocks Cardinals.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 20.—That rule of the Roman Catholic church which provides that within ten days after the death of a pope the college of cardinals shall come together in Rome to choose his successor, is not likely to be carried out literally.

With warships blocking half the sea lanes, with most of the railroads of Europe given over entirely to the transportation of soldiers and munitions of war, it would be impossible for many of the princes of the church to reach the Vatican within the time limit.

Cardinal Gibbons, who stands close to the head of the sacred college in seniority, and Cardinal O'Connell of Boston, if they started at once from America might reach Rome in ten days. They would have to be fortunate enough to find a fast ship, sailing directly to the Mediterranean, and of course even temporary interruption of the voyage by war vessels would make it impossible to reach the Eternal City.

Why Is It?

Sometimes it seems as if every person who is lacking in initiative, special ability or industry desires to be either a writer, an actor or an artist. The most agreeable way for a lazy person to make a living is to express his own opinions, emotions and impressions. —Norman Hapgood, in Harper's Weekly.

Seventy Members of College.

When complete the college of cardinals, which elects a new pope, consists of seventy members. The college of 1903, which elected Pope Pius X., consisted of sixty-three members, of whom fifty-six were present at the conclave.

The election of popes by conclave dates from the middle ages. In ancient times the vote of the Roman clergy, cast in the presence of the emperor, was the elective power. It was not until 1059, under Nicholas II, that the papacy was completely emancipated from the temporal ambition of its adherents. Gregory VII was the last pope to make even a nominal concession to laymen.

Peasant May Become Pope.

Theoretically, any one may be elected pope. He need not be a cardinal, priest, nor yet a monk. Sixtus V. was a swineherd in his youth; Cardinal Crotti father was a stevedore, while the parents of Pius X. were peasants. Cardinals Yauvettelli and Oreglia are mentioned as possible successors to Pope Pius.

Pope's Wish WAS TO REVISIT VENICE

Rome, Aug. 19.—Pope Pius at one time declared that he would willingly give up two years of his life if he might be able to visit only once more his beloved Venice.

When Cardinal Sarto was elected pope in 1903 he adopted the same attitude as had his two immediate predecessors, toward the present Italian government which in 1870 annexed the papal states to the united Italy and took the city of Rome away from the popes, and made it the capital of the Italian kingdom.

His attitude was for the popes to declare themselves prisoners in the Vatican at the hands of the Italian government and never during their entire pontificate leave either the Vatican or the Vatican gardens.

not surprising that when the important see of Mantua became vacant, in 1884, Leo XIII. chose Giuseppe Sarto to fill the place. It was no easy task to which he had been called, for his predecessor had allowed discipline to become slack. His persuasive powers and administrative gifts were tested to the utmost, but he was fully equal to the ungrateful task.

Two years later Pope Leo recognized Sarto's merits, by raising him to the Sacred College, with the title of San Bernardo alle Terme, at a consistory held June 15, 1893. At the same time he was chosen out of all the Venetian prelates to fill the patriarchate of Venice.

Sought to Build Up Church.

Pope Pius' policy was the simplest. His election resulted because a majority of the cardinals had wearied of diplomacy and its barren results, and longed for a pontiff who would build up the units of organization—that is, the dioceses they ruled by bishops. In France, Italy and Spain these units were either paralyzed or directed by the hostile or indifferent state. There was a show of life, but not such teaming and varied life as is seen in the dioceses of America, Canada and Ireland. It was known that Pius would desert diplomacy and try to make all dioceses as they are in English-speaking countries.

That diplomacy found no place in Pius' mind is evidenced by many of his acts. His action toward the French government was perfect in indifference. Therefore France had all the trouble and the pope was out of it.

When the trouble between the church and state broke out in France and the Concordat was dropped, the world looked to the pope, speculating as to what course he would take. What he did seemed to be the only

Pope's Last Message Urged Peace Prayers

Rome, via London, Aug. 19.—The Pope, just previous to his fatal seizure, addressed the following exhortation to the whole world:

"And in the midst of this universal confusion and peril, we feel and know that we hold fatherly love and apostolic ministry demand of us that we should with all earnestness turn the thoughts of Christendom thither, 'whence cometh help' to Christ, the Prince of Peace and the most powerful mediator between God and man.

"We charge, therefore, the Catholics of the whole world to approach the throne of Grace and Mercy, each and each of them, and more especially the clergy, whose duty furthermore it will be to make in every parish, as the bishops shall direct, public supplication, so that the merciful God may, as it were, be wearied with the prayers of His children and speedily remove the evil causes of war, giving to them who rule to think the thoughts of peace and not of affliction.

NEUTRALITY IS ASKED

AMERICANS ARE WARNED BY PRESIDENT WILSON AGAINST
"TAKING SIDES."

MAY PROVE PERIL TO U. S.

Final Effect of European War on This Country Rests "Within Ourselves,"
Says Nation's Executive—Urges
Self-Control on Part of All Citizens.

Washington, Aug. 20.—President Wilson addressed a communication to the American people on Tuesday, asking them to observe strict neutrality in speech and conduct in the present European conflict and to act in a spirit of impartiality and fairness and friendliness to all concerned. His statement says:

"My fellow countrymen:
"I suppose that every thoughtful man in America has asked himself during these last troubled weeks what influence the European war may exert upon the United States, and I take upon the liberty of addressing a few words to you in order to point out that it is entirely within our own choice what its effects upon us will be and to urge very earnestly upon you the sort of speech and conduct which will best safeguard the nation against distress and disaster."

"The effect of the war upon the United States will depend upon what American citizens say and do. Every man who really loves America will act and speak in the true spirit of neutrality which is the spirit of impartiality and fairness and friendliness to all concerned. The spirit of the nation in this crisis will be determined largely by what individuals and society and those gathered in public meetings do and say, upon what newspapers and magazines contain, upon what ministers utter in their pulpits and men proclaim their opinions on the street."

"The people of the United States are drawn from many nations and chiefly from the nations at war. It is natural and inevitable that there should be almost variety of sympathy and desire among them with regard to the issues and circumstances of the conflict. Some will wish one nation, others another to succeed in this momentous struggle."

"It will be easy to excite passion and difficult to lay it. Those responsible for exciting it will assume a heavy responsibility, responsibility for no less a thing than that the people of the United States, whose love of the country and whose loyalty to its government should unite them as Americans, should be divided into camps of hostility, not against each other, involved in the war itself in impulse and opinion if not in action. Such divisions among us would be fatal to our peace of mind and might seriously stand in the way of the proper performance of our duty as the one great nation at peace, the one people, holding itself ready to play a part of impartial mediation and speak the counsels of peace and accommodation, not as a partisan, but as a friend."

"I venture therefore, my fellow countrymen, to speak a solemn word of warning to every citizen, the deepest, most subtle, most essential breach of neutrality which may spring out of partisanship out of passionately taking sides. The United States must be neutral in fact as well as in name during these days that are to try men's souls. We must be impartial to our country as to our action; we must put a curb on our sentiments as well as upon our transactions that might be construed as a preference of one party to the struggle before another."

"My thought is of America. I am speaking, I feel sure, the earnest wish and purpose of every thoughtful American that this great country of ours, which is the center of our lives, which is in our hearts, should show herself in this time of peculiar trial a nation that beyond others to exhibit the fine police of undisturbed judgment, the dignity of self-control, the efficiency of dispassionate action, a nation that neither side in judgment upon councils and which keeps herself free to do what is honest and disinterested and truly serviceable for the peace of the world."

"Shall we not resolve to put upon ourselves the restraints which will bring to our people the happiness and the great and lasting influence for peace we covet for them?"

SPECIAL TAX IS NEAR

U. S. REVENUE CUT BY EUROPEAN WAR.

President Wilson Confers With Members of House and Senate on Situation.

Washington, Aug. 19.—Consideration of the problem of raising money to offset losses in customs revenues due to the outbreak of the European war continue at the White House. The president saw Senator Simmons, chairman of the senate finance committee, and Representative Underwood, chairman of the house ways and means committee, and discussed the question.

Earlier the president told callers he had not arrived at an opinion as to the best means for raising the necessary additional revenue. He said the possibility of issuing Panama canal bonds to meet the expected deficiency had not been seriously considered by the administration as yet.

The president, Senator Simmons and Representative Underwood agreed a special tax probably would be necessary, but the time for putting it in operation was not settled on. When treasury officials concluded that additional funds are necessary the president will send a special message to congress asking that a tax be levied.

Representative Underwood said the prospects are that manufacturing facilities of the nations involved in the war would be crippled for several years, making an early return to normal in import duties improbable even in the event of a short war. He added that the time for the adjournment of congress now appeared entirely problematical. He gave the impression that he expected congress to stay in session indefinitely.

Statistics on revenues will be immediately collected at the treasury department to be laid before the president and he will keep in close touch with the financial situation. He was told that there was no immediate shortage in prospect, but that the revenues of the government were steadily falling as a result of the European war.

Shortly before nine o'clock in the morning the Ancon started from the Atlantic side and arrived in the Pacific at six o'clock in the evening.

Col. George Goethals, builder of the canal and governor of the zone, was on the bridge, together with Capt. Hugh Redman, U. S. N., superintendent of transportation, who has overseen the plans for putting the first ship through. Other distinguished guests included President Porras of the republic of Panama and his staff.

Channel to Connect Lake Superior With Mississippi River by Way of Brule and St. Croix Rivers.

Madison.—Senator E. F. Akeley of Chippewa Falls and Assemblyman John A. Chinnock of Hudson, members of the Lake Superior-Mississippi canal commission, stopped in Madison on their way home from Washington, D. C., where they laid the canal project before a board of United States army engineers which declared the plan practicable from an engineering point of view and the only other question to be determined was whether the volume of commerce that it would carry would be sufficient to justify building it.

Senator Akeley said that congress would be asked to make the proposed canal a part of the general river and harbor improvement project. A bill is now pending before congress to appropriate $8,000,000 for a canal from Duluth and Superior to the Mississippi river, by way of the Brule and St. Croix rivers. Senator Knute Nelson and Congressman Charles R. Davis of Minnesota are pressing the latter bill.

The Minnesota men are willing to unite with the Wisconsin commission in an effort to secure a canal which shall follow the course proposed in the pending bill or any other feasible course.

The structure has two decks, one for vehicle and street car traffic, which has never been made available for use. It is half a mile long and cost nearly $2,000,000.

A Stork Party.

The entertainment of a prospective mother has always been a perplexing problem to her friends who desire to help her through the monotonous days of waiting. Not long ago I attended a party of this sort, which proved to be a source of pleasure, both to the guest of honor and to her friends who were invited.

Mrs. Adams originated the idea, and telephoned other of her friends, who then had a "rehearsal meeting" at which the young matron told of her plans, asked for suggestions, and finally evolved a scheme. It was decided that each one should make a certain article or articles, for the baby's wardrobe, and these combined would comprise a complete layette for the little stranger.

When all was in readiness, the guest of honor was invited for an afternoon drive with Mrs. Adams in her car. At the appointed time, the latter suggested that they stop at her home for refreshments. Here their friends had already gathered and after a couple of hours of music and conversation, the hostess invited us into the dining room where a simple luncheon consisting of sandwiches, coffee, fruit, cakes and ices was served. The place cards were tiny storks and cupid.

When we were through with lunch, the hostess told us that while we were partaking of good cheer, the old stork had paid a visit to the library and now requested our presence there.

Leading the way the guest of honor, she seated her by a small table facing the door, says Mrs. Adams' maid, dressed as a nurse, pushed a baby carriage into the room. She handed the astonished matron a card, which read:

"The Stork's Compliments to Mrs. B."

Mastering her surprise, Mrs. B. carefully lifted the downy blanket. Beneath, folded in a blue, satin-lined basket was a soft, white dannel robe, scalloped in baby blue, and tied with blue ribbons, along with sundry other dainty, ribbon-tied packages. Amid much merriment Mrs. B. untied the bundles and found, to her amazement, a complete outfit for the little stranger.

Time to Trim Trees.

An Oshkosh arboriculturist urges the owners of fancy shade trees to look to their trees now as this is the season trim and to do so with as little damage as possible. The man who is an authority on trees and arboriculture tells some methods of trimming foliage bearing trees with no disastrous effects to the trees and suggests the improvement of local shade trees now, while there is opportunity.

"The average city home owner," said the tree man, "is beginning to realize what great asset trees are. They do not only add to the pretty appearance to a home, but they aid in cooling the house, and they give a grateful out-of-door shade. More than that, to a commercial mind, they enhance the money value of a place."

But most people who own trees do not understand how to care for them. "In the first place when trees are grown, they can be treated so as to give a park-like appearance, by cutting away the branches and foliage."

Trimming trees there are a few rules which it will do no harm to repeat.

"In cutting off a limb cut it close and parallel to the trunk from which it proceeds."

"In cutting a limb of any weight protect the limb or trunk from which it is being cut, by first making an incision on the under side of the limb to be removed. This will prevent the bark tearing down the trunk."

"Cover any large scars with paint. Paint with considerable white lead is satisfactory."

"As far as possible leave no knots or stubs on the tree, but make all cuts cleanly and evenly."
